85 YEAR OLD MAN KILLED BY AUTO

Christoph Schilling, Blue Island Victim of Tragic Death on 159th

Christoph Schilling, aged 85 years, a former Bremen Township resident and of late residing in Blue Island, met a tragic death on 159th street near the Charles Breitbarth farm, when he was struck and almost instantly killed by an automobile driven by Herman Uthe of Orland Park Friday evening about 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Schilling and his son Charles had driven out from Blue Island to visit at the Chas. Breitbarth home on 159th street and had just escaped an accident while turning off the highway into the farm lane. A truck which was back of their car, came close to hitting their car as they turned off the road. The truck driver in order not to hit them had run his truck in a ditch and upset. A wrecker was called to get the truck back on the road. Shortly afterward, Mr. Schilling and his son walked down the highway.

Mr. Uthe was driving east and an oncoming car, going in the opposite direction failed to dim the bright lights which momentarily blinded Mr. Uthe and he did not see the men walking on the pavement. In attempting to get out of the way of one car, the elderly gentleman stepped directly in front of the other and was struck by Mr. Uthe's car which was going about 40 miles an hour at the time. The impact hurled the aged man backward against the car. His skull was crushed, an arm and hand broken and his chest crushed. Death was almost instant.

Dr. R. Carmichael of Tinley Park was summoned and pronounced the aged man dead.

Riding with Mr. Uthe was his wife. Both were on their way to attend a basketball game at Tinley Park. Both were overcome with the shock of the tragedy and Mrs. Uthe was under a physician's care for several days.

A coroner's inquest was held at the Hirsch Chapel in Tinley Park Saturday morning and Mr. Uthe was exonerated by the jury who returned a verdict of accidental death.

Mr. Schilling was born October 26, 1853 in Bremen Township. On July 11, 1878 he was united in marriage with Marie Witt. After their marriage they located on a farm near Gossesville north of Tinley Park. To this union eight children were born. His wife, two sons and one daughter preceded him in death.

In 1916 he retired from the farm, locating in Blue Island where he resided up to the time of his death.

Surviving are one son, Charles; four daughters, Mrs. Anna Huhnstock, Mrs. Louise Weber, Mrs. Minnie Walters, Mrs. Amelia Evans; one sister, Mrs. Mary Ebling; four grand children and two great grand children.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the Trinity Lutheran church at 159th & Oak Park with Rev. Martin Frick officiating. Burial was made in the Trinity Lutheran Cemetery.

ELECTRIC BILLS WILL BE LOWER AFTER JUNE 1

Reductions in the electric rates to residential and commercial customers of the Public Service company of Northern Illinois, are announced this week by James M. Slattery, chairman of the Illinois Commerce Commission. Customers throughout the territory served by the Company will save approximately $1,140,000 annually under the new rates. This reduction will be made in two cuts; the first, totaling approximately $399,000 annually and effective April 1st, will apply to stores, offices and small business establishments. The second cut, totaling approximately $741,000 annually, will reduce the rates of household users beginning with bills rendered on and after June 1st.

A feature of the new commercial rates is that the demand charge, which in effect represents the company's readiness to serve costs, becomes substantially less an item in the total cost of electricity to this class of customer. The "demand charge" for the small commercial customers will be eliminated.

According to Britton I. Budd, president of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, the new rate takes into account the growing tendency on the part of various types of commercial enterprises to develop improved standards of lighting and sign illumination, and encourages the use of modern window lighting and air-conditioning.

Mr. Budd stated the new reduced rates represent a further step not only toward lowering the cost of electricity to homes and businesses in northern Illinois, but also toward rate simplification. It will be recalled that a reduction for residential customers amounting to more than $720,000 was made less than a year ago.

With these latest commission orders more than $23,300,000 annual rate reductions for customers of public utilities throughout the state have been effected within the last six years. During the period, from January 1, 1933, to the entering of the latest orders, electric rate reductions by the four northern Illinois companies, were as follows:

Commonwealth Edison Company, $4,405,300; Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, $4,251,936; Illinois Northern Utilities Company, $534,062; Western United Gas and Electric Company, $509,005. A total in all companies of $9,710,303.

Mr. Slattery, chairman of the commission, said the reductions were decided upon after prolonged and exhaustive investigation by the commission staff into the operating revenues of these four utilities. Also they were the result of a series of conferences with representatives of the company over a period of months in keeping with Governor Horner's often stated policy that the primary duty of the commission under his administration is to secure fair and reasonable rates to the public for public utility service. By resort to negotiations the expense of long drawn out rate proceedings and litigation was avoided.

Frank Wheeler Former Probate Clerk Dies

Frank W. Wheeler, well known former clerk of the Probate court of Will County, died suddenly Monday afternoon in his home 504 Western Ave., Joliet following a short illness of heart complication. Surviving Mr. Wheeler are his widow Harriet, one daughter Miss May H. Wheeler and a sister Mrs. Eva Stetson of Reading, Pennsylvania.

In 1916 Mr. Wheeler was appointed clerk of the board of improvements of the city of Joliet and on March 1, 1918 became deputy probate clerk. In Nov. 1922 he was elected clerk of the Probate court and was reelected in 1926 and 1930.

His club affiliations included Madison Lodge of which he was secretary, Joliet Chapter R.A.N., Joliet Commandery Knights Templar, Anzar Temple, A.A.O.N.M.S., Springfield, Maston Veterans Association; Elks; Knights of Pythias; Moose; Sons of Veterans and various sports organizations. Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock from Chamberlain and Sloan Chapel in Joliet with burial in Elmhurst cemetery.

Plan To Expand Bird Sanctuary At Orland Park

Plans are being made by Cook county forest preserve officials to make McGinnis slough, once the site of trade and warfare between the Indians and early French pioneers, one of the most famous bird sanctuaries within this part of the country. Three condemnation suits, entered last September against private property surrounding the site, will be heard within the next few weeks by Judge Dennis J. Normoyle of the Circuit court, according to announcement last week by George A. Basta, chief attorney of the forest preserve district.

The slough is located in the township of Orland Park and borders the north end of the village.

County, city, and neighborhood organizations interested in conservation and protection of wild life have contributed their support over a period of years to the establishment of the slough as a refuge for water fowl.

Natural Resting Place
Due to their efforts and those of forest preserve officials, the sanctuary since 1932 has become recognized as one of the best natural resting places for migratory water fowl in the midwest. Year after year, however, the privately owned property on the north end has been leased to hunters and blinds have been raised near the preserve's water mark.

According to Robert Mann, superintendent of maintenance of the forest preserve district, Cook county lies in a major fly way and is a funnel for birds coming from as far north as Greenland and Labrador. Reaching the Illinois valley, the birds spread out to other states. McGinnis slough, also known in conservation circles as Orland Wild Life sanctuary is one of the largest inland water areas now reserved as a bird refuge in this section of the nation.

With the success of the condemnation suits, forest preserve officials plan to employ a resident wild life expert this spring for the sanctuary. His duties will be to enforce all hunting, fishing, skating, and boating regulations as well as to maintain records of the migratory fowl as to species, number, native habitat, and period of stay at the refuge. With the permission of the United States Biological survey, one of the largest bird banding stations in the state will be established.

Lake Also Out of Preserve
In addition to the north end, the forest preserve does not own 25 acres of water area in the southeast side of the slough, located on the Southwest highway and U. S. 45. This is known as Orland lake. If this territory is acquired all boating and fishing privileges will be maintained as the area is almost separated from the main body of the refuge.

Much of the 720 acres in the slough, 265 acres of which are water, was purchased by the forest preserve in 1916, but was not reserved as a water fowl sanctuary until the early '30's when, at the instigation of the Chicago Conservation council, the 3d district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs and the Cook County Federation of Women's clubs a petition was circulated.

Under the direction of Mrs. Ben E. Buttles, then conservation chairman of the 3d district in the women's clubs, the slough was dedicated in 1932 and a marker was erected on a large boulder on the east side of the lake designating it as the Orland Wild Life sanctuary.

Records Date to 1840

Mrs. George B. Ward, present club conservation chairman for the district, who is now interested in the refuge, has made a study of the history of the territory. She reveals that the land was originally owned back in 1840 by early Palos Park pioneers, Michael McGinnis, after whom a slough is named, John Humphreys, William Edward Mahaffay, Captain Richard McClaughey, and James McMahon.

The Chicago Conservation council, composed of 90 national, state, and local organizations concerned with the outdoors for beauty and recreation, has been interested in the sanctuary for more than six years. Dr. R. M. Strong, 5840 Stony Island avenue, chairman of the council, was instrumental in having it reserved as a refuge back in 1932. Working with Dr. Strong was Dr. Alfred Lewy, 2051 East 72d street, director of the Illinois Audubon society and past president of the Chicago Ornithological society.

Eager, also, to see the completion of the slough as a sanctuary are Kenneth A. Reid, conservation director of the Illinois Izaak Walton league; Mayor John Hart of Blue Island; Mayor William Coleman of Orland Park, and Mrs. Ward, conservation chairman of the 3d district in the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs.

"Uncle Dave" Gillett New Lenox Past 90th Milestone

Mr. David A. Gillette, widely known throughout New Lenox and surrounding communities as "Uncle Dave", celebrated his 90th birthday on Monday, March 6, 1939. Mr. Gillette has been confined to his bed for the past sixteen months and therefore, his birthday was celebrated informally by many of his friends calling at the home of his daughter, Mrs. T. D. Cooper with whom he resides.

Preceding the time of his present illness, Mr. Gillette was very active and his friends miss Uncle Dave with his customary spreading of good will wherever he went. It has been the pleasure of the editor to have been personally acquainted with him and it is with a deep sense of regret that Mr. Gillette is missed at the community gatherings, as he is one of the oldest residents in Will County, for at the age of six, he moved here in 1885 with his parents from New York his birthplace.

It was with great pleasure that Uncle Dave's acquaintances would gather around him to hear him relate of many happenings of the early history of Illinois and particularly our local communities. Although, he was not of sufficient age to answer Lincoln's call to arms in 1860, his older brother Abner, served 4 years with the federal forces and Mr. Gillette vividly remembers many famous occurrences which happened during the Civil War period. He has often related the instance when Abraham Lincoln spoke in Joliet and how it stirred the patriotic feeling of the community. Mr. Gillette states that Lincoln stood in a wagon in a woods, which is now the approximate site of the West Pines Hotel on Western Ave. in Joliet. Mr. Gillette once served under the sheriff of Will County as chief jailer under Sheriff Marshall after which he was employed by the Rock Island railroad as brakeman. He was thusly employed at the time of the Chicago fire and often speaks of the chaotic conditions existing in Chicago as a result of that great catastrophe.

In 1874 Mr. Gillette was united in marriage to Sarah Marshall, daughter of one of Will County's earliest settlers and to this marriage four children were born, one having died in early childhood. He has two daughters, Mrs. Peter J. Hastert of Joliet and Mrs. Thomas D. Cooper of New Lenox and one son, Mr. George I. Gillette of Whitmore, California. He has six grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

At the retirement of his father the late Isaac M. Gillette, he resigned from the railroad service and took up the management of his father's farm of which he became owner and lived on this farm in Homer until his retirement.

From early childhood, Mr. Gillette was a member of Marley Community church and took an active part in the moral and social development of Will county as many notable figures have risen from the ranks to high position, having gained their early religious education and training from this church.

Mr. Gillette's philosophy of living could well be adopted as our guide. He was ever tolerant to the views and beliefs of others. He was never too busy to speak a good word of someone and he was never known to belittle others as he would say life was too short to spend in malicious thought or talk, as lending a helping hand to those about us was the only way of reaping dividends of happiness.

Mr. Gillette is also a firm believer in Christianity and in one of his late interviews, he stated that he was not looking back on life, but ahead to a more abundant life and quoted St. John, 14th Chapter, second verse. "In my Father's House are many mansions. If it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you."

Mr. Gillette's many friends wish him contentment as he enters the sunset of life.

White Store Buys 101st Store Stock

J. J. Cohen, owner and manager of the popular Will County Department Store, "The White Store" of Joliet, has purchased the entire stock of the Goodman Department Store in Lemont, being the successful bidder from among more than 200 merchants seeking to acquire the merchandise.

This makes the 101st store purchase made by Mr. Cohen. In commenting on the sale Mr. Cohen said: "We bought everything at less than 50 cents on the dollar and must as soon as we can get it out on the counters we will place it on sale."

The merchandise is all this season's goods and is all clean fresh stock.

Alfred Emiley In New Lenox Supervisor Race

The New Lenox Township election to be held Tuesday, April 4th promises to be a hotly contested one. Since the recent caucus another ticket known as the Citizens Ticket has come into existence. The candidates thereon filed their petitions with town clerk, Ceward C. Batson shortly after the caucus.

The regular ticket known as the Town Ticket shows the following candidates:

For Supervisor, Fred A. Francis; for Highway Commissioner, A. W. Walsh; for school trustee full term, E. D. Gillett; for school trustee to fill vacancy, Geo. Morris.

Candidates on the Citizens Ticket are: for Supervisor, Alfred Emiley; for Highway Commissioner, William Haska.

The polling places are as follows: first precinct, Colonial Hall; second precinct, Emiley Hall.

Orland Housewife Winner In Radio Spelling Contest

At the request of 300 housewives, a housewives spelling bee was broadcast over radio station WLS last Saturday morning between 9:30 and 10 o'clock and the housewives according to Don Kelley, conductor of the spell down proved they were better spellers than their high school student children.

Mrs. Arthur Holz of Orland Park captured 3rd place and a cash prize as one of the champion orthographeists.

In the spelldown the housewives glibly rattled off such difficult words as hippopotamus and similar long winded words, but quite a number of them tripped up on words commonly associated with the daily routine of the home. The words which seemed to prove sticklers for many of the spellers were recipe, macaroni avocado, bouillon, and cantaloupe.

The spelldown broadcast was heard over all the middlewest.

Attend Preview

Mrs. L. G. Bruder and Mrs. Wm. Semmler, Mokena, attended the 1st showing of the movie, "The Spirit of Culver" at the beautiful Esquire Theatre at Oak Street and Michigan Boulevard, Chicago, Wednesday morning as guests of the theatre proprietors. This is a wonderful picture and shows the evil of wars and how little they really accomplish toward making this world a better place in which to live. The picture also shows problems created by wars which do not exist until wars occur. The picture is full of splendid life which youth in all its energy, ambition and good ideals presents. There is a humorous side and also a nice little incidental love affair, such as takes place in the lives of young men attending schools as Culver Military in Indiana.

We must not forget to say a word about the beautiful new movie house, The Esquire. It is the last word in modernistic lighting, colors and architecture and is well worth attending.

MOUNTAIN MAN

A Banner Fiction Serial
By HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

© H. C. Wire—WNU Service

SYNOPSIS

Jim Cotter, forest ranger, had been mysteriously killed in the pursuit of his duties. Gordon Breck, his best friend, takes over Cotter's job, hoping to avenge his murder. "Dad" Cook, forest superintendent, warns Breck that the Tillson brothers, mountain moonshiners, are apt to give him trouble. Before leaving for his mountain station, Breck buys an outfit and decides to attend the public dance run by the Tillsons in Lone Tree. Breck dances with Louise Temple, pretty "cowgirl" for whom he takes a liking. Unknown to Breck, she is being courted by Art Tillson, youngest of the three Tillson brothers. Angered by Breck's attentions to the girl, he picks a fight which ends indecisively when someone sets fire to the hall. Breck and his chief set out for the mountain station. Halfway, they are met by Sierra Slim, moss-back mountaineer who is also in the forest service. Breck learns that Sierra is tracking down Jim Cotter's murderer must be done cautiously. Cook, Breck and Sierra continue their ascent of the mountain. They sight the Tillsons, returning to their hideaway. Next day, Cook sends Breck and Sierra in one direction to repair the telephone line, while he takes another. Sierra tells Breck more about Louise Temple. "That kid's a thoroughbred," he says. He also believes that Art Tillson is not essentially "bad," but is the victim of circumstances. Breck is directed to go to Rock House Meadow, his permanent base. On his way, he is the target of a pistol shot from an unseen assailant. The bullet misses, but his frightened pack animals bolt and Breck goes in pursuit. Finding a deserted cabin, he takes shelter from the rain. A moment later the three Tillson brothers arrive and Breck hides in the cabin loft. Breck hears the three discuss a plot against his life. Waiting his chance, Breck surprises the brothers and holds them at the point of his gun. Jud, the oldest brother, offers a bribe if Breck will "make no trouble." Breck pretends to take the offer under consideration, lets the men go. Breck's duty is to take count at the annual cattle drive at Rock House Meadow. There he meets Louise Temple who is running her own cattle. Trapped in a narrow canyon before the onrushing steers, Breck's quick action saves her from being trampled. He takes her to his cabin over Art Tillson's protest.

She started at the sound of her own name softly spoken. Her dark eyes met his searchingly. "Why?" At once Breck realized there was no explainable reason for his assurance. He hesitated and Louise spoke first.

"No pity, thank you. I didn't fish for that. I'm a ranch woman now, and I'm going to make money at it. Sometimes I'm sure that's the most important thing anyway."

Breck answered bluntly from the depths of his own experience. "It isn't!"

"You seem to know."

"I do."

She leaned back from the table and away from him. Color of excitement left her cheeks, her eyes held only their level gaze.

"Who are you?" she asked. "Why are you here?"

With regret Breck felt their warm contact of common interest slip away. "I'm a forest ranger," he answered, "working at my job."

Outside a thunder of hoofs sounded over the meadow. He stood up and opened the door. The drive was coming through the opposite canyon notch, spreading in a great dark wedge into the bowl until, reaching the drift fence, it halted.

Louise left the bunk and stood beside Breck. "I guess your job has come," she said, "and mine too."

"I'll turn this cabin over to you tonight," Breck offered. "You'll rest better."

"Don't you think I've learned to rest with my back on a rock-pile, if only my face is to the stars?" She smiled, adding, "Thanks just the same. An Indian boy is bringing my camp pack. I always spread it near the creek above this station. Cowhands camp on the meadow."

The boy came before dark, leading a mule and the girl's blue horse. Breck watched her ride up stream until her small figure vanished in a shelter of pine.

For two hours, while he moved his possessions into his room, he could hear a rumble of cattle entering the meadow. It was eight o'clock before the last of them poured in and cowboys' fires began to pierce the shadows.

By nine full dark had come. He went to the telephone hung in its iron box on a post just outside the cabin door, cranked four rings to call headquarters, and when Cook answered, gave his report. "The drive is in, dad. I'm going out now and take a swing around."

"All right," the ranger's voice returned. "One circle ought to be enough. Show yourself in a few camps to let them know you're at it."

Breck hung up, mounted Kit and sat scanning the meadow bowl. Campfires were mostly at the further end, near where the black mass of cattle lay against the drift fence. His eyes swept those camps, then, continuing back of the station, fell upon one alone and not far away. Even as he watched, the light blinked as one figure crossed in front of the flames, then stopped.

He wheeled his horse, another. None of his business who was up there. He shouldn't see the girl again tonight. But that feeling of dissatisfaction was still upon him, dully irritable. He moved ahead, reasoning he would only ride by on patrol.

At his side the stream talked noisily, human in its wide range of tone, from low guttural voices to silvery laughter. It covered the sound of his horse's hoofs and also any words that might have come from the camp, until abruptly a man's quick retort broke through. There was anger in its suddenness, and a threat in the silence that followed.

With no hesitation Breck pushed past the thicket and into the girl's camp. He saw Louise sitting on her saddle, chin propped in both hands, Art Tillson standing before her. Tillson whirled as he approached and on his face was jealous rage.

Breck looked at the girl. "How are you, Louise?"

"She's all right!" Art cut in. "Don't need anything now." With scoffing sarcasm, he added, "Thanks for comin' up!" Then he turned his back.

Louise lifted her face to Breck, but he could not read through the shadows upon it. She might be telling him to go.

Art wheeled. "Well?" he snapped. Breck dismounted, dropped his reins and cast a casual gaze about. The girl had a comfortable camp; bed roll laid on dry pine needles, a small fire for cooking lighted between two rocks, and a larger blaze for warmth. When his eyes returned to Art Tillson, he saw a set determination tightening on the boy's jaw.

"If you've been sneakin' around," Art blurted, "I suppose you heard what I said just now."

Breck had heard only indistinct words and the heated retort, but replied, "If you don't want the whole meadow to know your business, don't yell so loud."

Art took a step toward him with fists doubled. "All right, I meant what you heard. Suppose we settle it here. Just take off your badge and I'll muss up that smooth face of yours. There ain't anyone to pull the lights on us like they did down below. We'll go through with it!"

Breck guessed what he was supposed to have overheard. Some jealous boast before Louise. He looked at young Tillson, more amused than angry. There was little enough to be jealous about. What could be settled by a fist fight? Nothing; unless Louise thought he was a coward.

She stood up. Breck shifted his glance to her, met her eyes and searched them, yet felt nothing in their level gaze.

"Look here, Art," he said at last, "you and I have nothing to settle with fists. One of us gets whipped tonight—tomorrow things are back where we started."

"Yeah, but someone hereabouts would know who's the best man."

Breck laughed. "She can probably tell that without a battle. And if you want to ask her, I'll be on my way." He paused, one foot lifted to his stirrup. "Just one thing. Don't say you backed me down. You'd have to prove that later."

Art shrugged indifferently. Argument had cooled him somewhat and had drawn the flush of rage from his face. He rolled a cigarette, and also went to his horse.

"You're pretty good at talkin', mister," he flung back. "I reckon I'll have to go packin' a dictionary instead of a six-gun!"

He mounted in a lithe spring, doffed his hat to Louise, let his horse rear once and dashed away, proudly erect and showing his full sense of victory.

As Breck swung to his saddle Louise crossed the firelight to him. "You did a fine thing just now, Gordon Breck, and I thank you for it. Don't consider why I say so—you might only make a wrong guess."

With that she turned away and Breck rode from her camp. She had thanked him for keeping out of trouble with Art. She had thanked him for Art's sake! In spite of her asking him not to, he did consider why she had said it; and guessed the only thing possible. She was in love with the boy.

He shook off a stab of jealousy. Why shouldn't she be? Art was handsome. He was hot-headed and looking for trouble most of the time, but no fool. Probably would make something of the cattle business if he had the chance. He wondered if Louise knew about the other business. Of course she did.

Truth came suddenly. She knew and was trying to pull him out!

His hands clenched the saddle horn. Savagely he asked, "What's all this to you? You didn't come for a girl!"

He had ridden preoccupied, with sight dimmed by visions of a small dark face, until now, abruptly, something pulled him back to his job. His horse, going for a time unguided, had with keen instinct fol-saddle. Simultaneously a rider broke from the herd and dashed into the nearest pines. Breck raced after him. Blackness of the forest closed in. He could hear the other horse scramble over rock, tried to follow, came to a granite barrier. A game trail must be there, but it was a blind thing, and he was blocked. Behind him, a stampede had started in the meadow.

Wheeling, he cut back across the upper end as a wave of cattle reached it, and plunging into them, turned the rush downward. Once on the move they were easily handled. As they quieted to a walk, he flashed a light on the flanks of those nearest. The brands were varied, yet one appeared on more than half the lot. JGJ. Satisfied, Breck fell back, pushed the bunch rapidly down the canyon and in an hour shoved them into the main herd at Rock House.

Campfires still glowed there. Breck went to one close by, swung off and squatted on the ground with a half a dozen cowhands.

A gray-whisker offered greetings for all. "Howdy, Ranger?" He turned to a boy at his side. "Dud, cut off a steak and stick it on the fire."

"I ate awhile ago," Breck said. "Thanks." And to the boy. "Don't bother, son." He traded news a moment before asking, "Who's outfit is the JGJ?"

"JGJ?" the boss repeated. "That's Jackson, John G. Looking for old John G., are you?"

"Yes," Breck answered, "I'd like to see him. Camped near here?"

A lean, worn finger pointed into the night. "Yonder. See a fire next that rock? That's him." Breck did not rise at once. He wanted the companionship of these men and a share in their talk. But none spoke; no one looked his way. Presently a cowboy stood up, went to a bed roll and began to pull off his boots. Another followed.

"Well," said Breck, moving over to his horse, "sorry I wasn't hungry. Thanks again."

After he had ridden a short distance from camp, he looked back. The two cowboys had left their bed rolls and were returning to the fire.

He found J. G. Jackson sitting with his back against a granite boulder, alone, a gray-haired veteran of the cow country, hard-faced in the flicker of firelight. But when he dismounted and came close to the man, that hardness was gone.

Jackson's greeting was the usual, "Howdy, Ranger. Have you et?"

Breck sat down across the fire from him, laughing, "This sure is a well-fed country. I've just turned down one meal."

"Ain't no call for a man to go hungry up here," Jackson asserted. He paused over lighting his pipe, then added, "No matter who he might be."

For a moment Breck hated the thought of duty. Here was friendliness; a time for listening to an old-timer's yarns. Devil take the cows! Yet the god drove him.

"Jackson," he said, "I have just brought down more than a hundred head from the saddle."

The old man's eyes twinkled over his pipe bowl. "That so? Hell! You oughtn't to have took the trouble."

"I guess they're strays," said Breck.

"Yeah, I reckon so."

"With a night rider behind them."

Jackson put down his pipe. "Meanin' which?"

"They were being shoved out of Rock House before the count."

"Any of my stuff among 'em?"

"More than half the bunch."

Diver Takes Walk in Undersea Forest While Searching for Long Lost Vessel

Have you ever wandered alone through the green, silent depths of a dim forest? It's an eerie experience. But it's like walking down a busy street compared with wandering through a nightmarish forest discovered by John Childs—a forest which no man but he has entered, save through the gates of death, observes a writer in Pearson's London Weekly.

Peopled by fearsome monsters, its green silence is enough to strike awe into anyone's heart. For this forest lies 240 feet under water, on the sea-bed off Green Cape, New South Wales, where Childs, a deep-sea diver, was searching for the sunken steamer Cumberland.

Childs found the submarine forest when, losing his bearings, he was dragged over the hard sand of the sea bed. Suddenly he saw, through the dark green water, just ahead of him, what he describes as "the black shape of a fantastic forest," made up of gently-swaying deep-sea undergrowth about 12 feet high.

As he walked into it, mutton-fish and sharks swam around him, and octopuses crawled about on the sands. Then came the most startling spectacle of all. In the heart of the under-sea forest he found a portion of the superstructure of a steamer. It is not, he is convinced, part of the Cumberland, and although he brought up portions to the surface they could not be identified. Another puzzling feature is the whereabouts of the rest of the sunken steamer. "The sand was too hard to have buried her," says Diver Childs.

At Capetown harbor another mystery wreck has been discovered by dredgers—this time that of a ship believed to be centuries old.

Trousers Were Scarce

In the pioneer days, most men had only one pair of trousers at a time, having a new pair made by the missus when the old pair wore out. If through an accident or some odd happening a man lost his trousers all of a sudden, notes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, he usually had to stay in bed until his wife made him a new pair. There are cases in which trousers were destroyed by fire or water or became unwearable because of an assault by a skunk, whereupon a man went into hiding while his wife went to work on new pants. The two-pant suit was never dreamed of.

PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON

LESSON TEXT—Acts 12:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him.—Acts 12:5.

"Prayer Changes Things," says a popular motto. "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of," is another much-used quotation. Still another is, "Satan trembles when he sees the weakest saint upon his knees." We say the words, but how often we fail to practice the truth. Prayer seems to be such an interesting topic for discussion, and yet so seldom do we really pray. The teaching of God's Word and the testimony of thousands of His children down through the centuries, yes, even our own experience, demonstrates that the greatest power for good that we can wield is prayer. God give us grace to use it in our daily walk and life and for His glory!

I. Prayer for a Prisoner (v. 5).

The members of the early Church knew what to do with their problems and troubles. They prayed. The same solution is available today. Whatever else we may do by way of planning and working, it must follow prayer if we are to succeed. We really cannot do anything else until we have prayed.

Troubles may be a blessing if they drive us to our knees. Peter was in jail for the gospel's sake. Prayer had been made for his deliverance, and yet the last night had come and he was still not free. However, his friends prayed on. God had given them faith to believe and the conviction that they should continue in prayer for him. Under such circumstances we must never cease to pray, even though the very "zero hour" has come. "Man's extremity is God's opportunity."

II. Deliverance by God (vv. 6-10).

God does answer prayer. Some presumably brilliant folk would have us believe that prayer is merely a subjective experience, a sort of spiritual exercise, which does the individual who prays certain good, but never reaches God or changes things. How would they explain what happened to Peter, and the hundreds of thousands of other definite prayer answers throughout the centuries?

The answer in Peter's case was so remarkable that even he thought he was only dreaming. Apparently God gave His persecuted servant sweet sleep that night, while He kept Peter's friends alert in prayer. But when Peter found himself outside the prison he knew something had happened.

There are many interesting things to note in this incident. Observe that what Peter could do for himself God did not do, but what Peter could not do, God's angel did. Note also that when God works, the spiritually unenlightened know nothing of it. The guards did not know what had happened until morning. Consider also that the angel took Peter as far as the open street, then left him to himself. God may meet a special need by miraculous intervention, but that does not mean that from then on we are to live by constant miracles. There are many practical and precious spiritual lessons which we may learn from these verses.

III. Results of Answered Prayer (vv. 11-17).

God does not answer prayer or perform any of His mighty works simply to make people marvel or to add to someone's comfort. It is true that He does thus manifest His loving consideration for us, and that men do marvel at His greatness, but there are other purposes in the workings of His grace and power.

In this case the first result was the freedom of His witness. He had been in prison and that was for God's glory; now he was to be free, and that too was to be for His glory.

Then, His deliverance was a great testimony, not only to those who were praying in the upper room, but to God's people down through the ages. Answered prayer is one of the great testimonies to the Christian faith.

Fellowship resulted from Peter's liberation. He went at once to meet with his fellow believers. Although he did not tarry long with them, he did share with them his remarkable experience, and admonished them to tell the others. If God has done something for you, share the good news with your brethren.

Service also resulted from this answer to prayer. Peter was not delivered that he should go about the city boasting that he was too strong for Herod's jail. Nor was it merely that he might go from place to place to lecture on his unusual experience. He was set free to go about his normal life of witnessing for Christ. We are "saved to serve." The normal expression of a life in Christ should be service for Him. God delivers us from trouble, sorrow, even death, that we may serve Him.

SAFETY TALKS

What Are You Going to Do?

IT DEPENDS on whether you're going to kill someone or just injure him.

If the automobile accident you may have next week is going to do a lethal job, the chances are your car will strike a pedestrian. On the other hand, if only non-fatal injuries are inflicted, it's an odds-on bet that you'll bump smack into another motor vehicle.

National Safety Council statistics for 1937 show that when a traffic accident produces a fatality, the collision is between a car and a pedestrian in 39 per cent of the cases. Collisions between two motor vehicles produce 26 per cent of the fatalities with other types of collisions contributing smaller numbers to the total.

However, the Council says, it is collisions between two or more motor vehicles that produce the bulk of non-fatal injuries—53 per cent or 725,000 cases in 1937. Collisions between a motor vehicle and a pedestrian produce the next largest number of non-fatal injury cases—25 per cent or 335,000 cases.

In 1937 traffic accidents killed 15,400 pedestrians and 10,300 deaths occurred as the result of collisions between two or more motor vehicles.

Watch Your Kidneys!

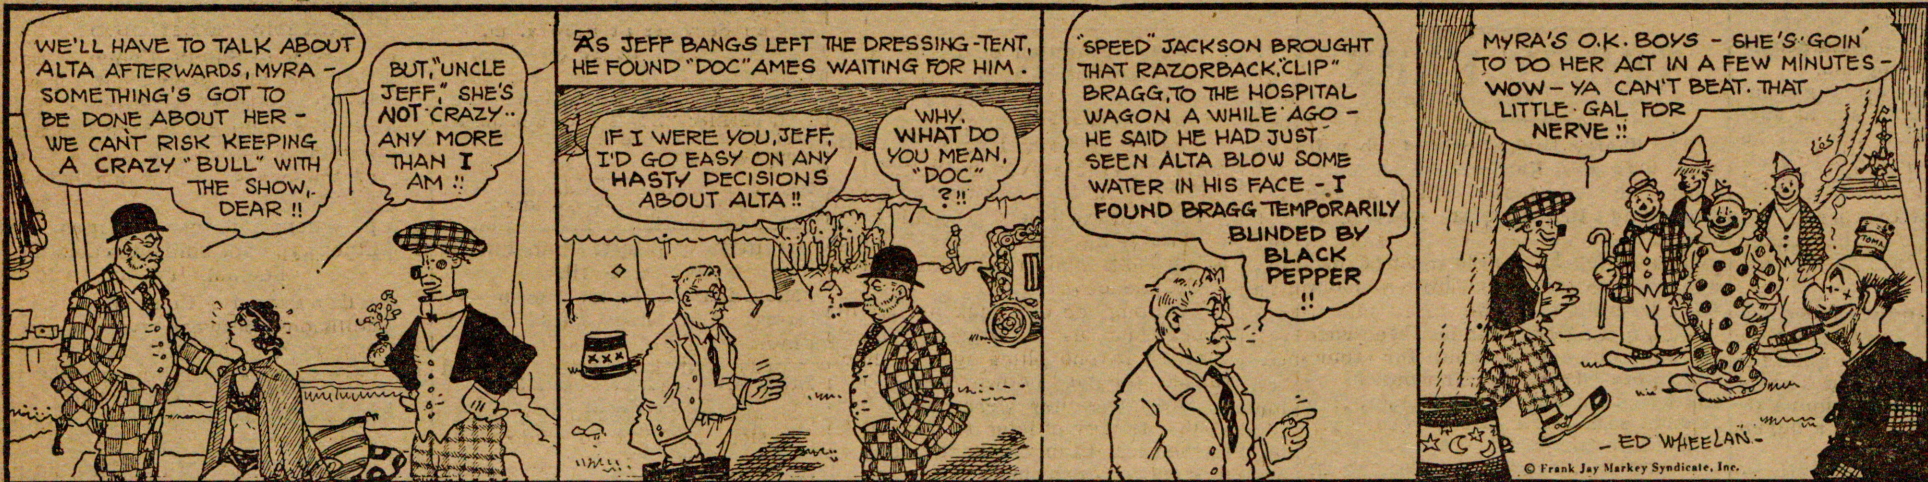

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. Farm Bureau Tax Experts Attend Tax School

Two tax schools were held in south and north Cook county, February 21 and 24, respectively. John Watson, of the Illinois Agricultural Association, conducted the schools with the Farm Bureau Committeemen and the Township assessors. In stating the purpose of the meetings, Dan Bergman, chairman of the Tax committee said, "Our purpose is, frankly, co-operation with the assessors and the assessor's office in Cook county. We appreciate the work done by the assessors in the last quadrenial assessment. Had it not been for the readjustment in assessments in Cook county many farmers would have been forced to quit."

Watson's Statistical School

Mr. John Watson, director of the Taxes and Statistics for the Illinois Agricultural association, was introduced and conducted a discussion. Mr. Watson pointed out that under the existing laws of the state that had been sustained by court decisions, taxes on all property must be uniform. Also, the basis of taxation is a fair cash sale value of property. He distinguished between actual sales and contemplated sales. An actual sale refers to land that is sold voluntarily. The seller must not be under coercion to sell because of mortgage or other handicaps. He must be in a position to decline to sell if he is not satisfied with the price offered. The buyer must be equally free to buy or not to buy. Perhaps the total sale may not be consummated with cash but the buyer should be in a position to make a cash payment large enough so that his equity in the property purchased is such that he will wish to retain it.

In Cook county 37 per cent of the assessed value is used on which to apply the rate for arriving at the amount of taxes that shall be paid. Watson gave the history of how this 37 per cent was arrived at, which was a figure he computed a number of years ago as being the ratio between the fair cash sale value of the property and the amount for which the property was assessed. He stated that he did not think that this 37 per cent would hold at the present time, and made the suggestion that a number of sales should be secured in order to arrive at the ratio that was actually being used at the present time, in order to get a uniform assessment.

Taxes on Farms High

Mr. Watson made it clear that it was impossible to continually keep decreasing the assessments on property with the idea that this would eventually solve the tax problems that farmers have at the present time. He even ventured the statement that real estate in the city of Chicago was laboring under as big a handicap as farm lands in Cook county. The system of taxation that we are using now is 120 years old. It was obviously fair a century ago when the wealth of the country was represented mostly by farms, homes and business properties. Since that time other forms of property have appeared that are not paying towards the upkeep of local government. Education, which is essentially a local tax problem, accounts for as high as 60 per cent of the taxes paid. The state guarantees each child an education. This would appear to be a state problem as much as a local problem. Many boys and girls are educated at the expense of rural districts and then spend their productive lives in cities that have not paid the cost of their education. This does not exactly mean state control of our educational systems. Sixty-five per cent of all income, excluding fees and commissions, do not contribute to cost of government; fourteen per cent of income is in interest on bonds and other intangibles that do not contribute to the cost of local government. In other words, 79 per cent of the nation's income escapes this form of taxes. Mr. Watson said he was not attacking wealth or the ownership of property. He himself is the owner of farms in the state of Illinois and knew what the tax payer's problems were. This left 21 per cent of the nation's income for farm owners, small businesses, rental property, farms, etc. Because of high taxes real property has no income. Perhaps of this 21 per cent residual income, 10 per cent represented income from labor and management. Therefore, no more than 11 per cent of the income from property is paying all the taxes of government for the total 100 per cent. This condition, according to Watson, is fast destroying the ownership of homes and farms. He predicted that he would undoubtedly see the failure of the city of Chicago to pay for its mounting costs of government under this system of taxation in a few years. At that time it might be possible to arouse public opinion back of a revision of our state constitution so that income would assist property in paying government costs.

Assessors Attend Meetings

Mr. John Clark delegated Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Baker of his office to attend this meeting in his stead. Mr. Sullivan made contributions to the meeting in pointing out the conditions under which the assessors were laboring, especially in trying to get intangibles on the books. Each assessor present made a contribution to the meeting. Those present were as follows: Assessors Emil Hattendorf, Hanover township; Frank Landwehr, Northfield township; Herman C. Debermann, Palatine township; Otto Busse, Elk Grove township; John W. McGregor, Maine township; Henry H. Dilg, Niles township; Herman Lichthardt, Schaumburg township; J. Fred Meyer, Wheeling township; Louis Ursitti, Bloom township; Joseph Lentz, Worth township; Henry Cohrs, Rich township; Geo. Heidel, Palos township.

A number of Assessors who could not be present asked for a report of the meeting.

Democrats to Give Big Dance St. Patrick's Eve

A huge celebration and dance is planned by the Cook County Young Democrats for St. Patrick's night, on Friday, March 17th, at the Aragon ballroom to celebrate the great primary victory of Mayor Edward J. Kelly and his colleagues, Ludwig D. Schreiber and Thomas S. Gordon. Young people in each of the fifty wards in the city of Chicago are expected to turn out in large numbers to attend this gala affair. Although the thirty County Town districts in Cook County have no connection with the Chicago Mayoralty race, many hundreds of these young people will also attend the dance.

Following the three successful dances sponsored by the Cook county Young Democrats last month at the Aragon, Trianon, and Paradise ballrooms, the committee feels sure that the Aragon dance on St. Patrick's night will be the most successful of all. A special souvenir will be presented free to everyone attending.

The committee in charge of tickets consists of Myron Frazin, James Van Zeyl, James Ryan, William Sheehan, Marvin Mayer, Joseph Krybynski, George Keane, Thomas Kelly, Harry Bell, and John Hennigan. Tickets may also be obtained at the headquarters of the Cook County Young Democrats, Room 1222, Morrison hotel. Mayor Edward Kelly, Ludwig Schreiber, and Thomas S. Gordon will be guests of honor.

NEW REPORTER TRIES COVERING SOCIETY EVENT

By THE OFFICE BOY

Well sir, another week—and another hole to fill. I guess it's going to be kind of hard, too, judging from the lack of excitement going on around this territory.

There's one or two items I could mention, but I guess I'll wait until they grow a little and maybe they'll make the front page. Of course in that case I won't write them on account of because I'm only a "cub" reporter, according to the boss. So I guess that leaves me rather "bear" as far as reporting goes.

Shucks! There ain't no news, except that last Sunday I rode up to La Grange, escorting the new operator (Slug) and his wife up there. It seems that they were at the boss's house Sunday, filling up on a wedding dinner.

You see he (Slug, the new operator) is an old married man. And when I stopped in at the boss's Sunday it came out that he's been married since December 15th! And they didn't even have a wedding dinner except maybe a plate of ham and eggs at Waukegan.

So the boss and his wife figured maybe they'd get along a lot better if they had a good meal under their belts. So they fixed up a feast that was fit for a king—and queen. (I wasn't invited though—but you should have seen the spread they put on.)

Well sir, they had an out-of-town-er there who came from way out in the Aragon dance by the name of Wendell Fay. And they didn't lack in the way of entertainment, either, 'cause Willi Henkel was there.

Heckling was at a high point too! Why, even this morning, Slug's face was still red. And when I asked him how come—he said he was working in red ink. Pretty bum excuse ain't it?

I hope there's some news next week. As the reporters say, "That's all... there isn't any more."

P. S.: See you next week.

Closing Date on AAA Loans on Corn to be Set

Will county farmers who are still planning to obtain AAA corn loans on their 1938 corn crop are advised by Byron Gaskill, chairman of the Will county agricultural conservation committee to file their application for a loan as soon as possible.

A closing date for loans will soon be established after which it will not be possible to obtain a loan even though the corn is otherwise eligible, Mr. Gaskill pointed out.

Corn to be eligible for an AAA loan must have been produced by the person making application for the loan and must have been produced on the farm on which it is stored. Furthermore, the corn allotment must not have been exceeded in 1938.

However, it is provided that eligible tenants who are moving this spring may under certain conditions seal corn that was not produced on the farm on which it will be sealed for a loan.

Persons desiring to obtain AAA loans on their corn are advised to call at the office of the county committee where their eligibility will be checked and where they may make out an application.

To date, 562 farmers in Will county have obtained loans on 551,048 bushels of corn.

MOKENA

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Mattes and Mrs. John Walsh visited with Mrs. Annie Mattes in her home in Austin the past week.

Mrs. Richard Hensel was hostess to the members of her pinocle club last Friday afternoon. A prize was awarded to Mrs. Fred Warning of Frankfort.

The St. John Brotherhood held their monthly business meeting last Thursday night. The members of the Hammond, Ind., Brotherhood were guests of the Mokena group.

Mrs. Elmer Sippel entertained the Ladies Afternoon Card club last Thursday.

The Mokena Ladies Afternoon Five Hundred club were entertained last Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Fred Warning in Frankfort.

A meeting of the Mokena Garden club was held at the home of Mrs. Anton Benson Friday night for the purpose of considering ways and means whereby the old cemetery on Wolf road at the edge of the village can be beautified. Mayor Harry F. Mall, Supervisor Wm. Kampe, highway commissioner Emil D. Cappel and Editor William Semmler were also present.

Supervisor Kampe reported that the WPA is not taking on any more cemetery projects. Mayor Mall stated that the village board would be willing to engage a man for a day or so to help in cutting out weeds and removing brush and undergrowth and in either erecting fallen down headstones or removing them in a separate pile so that grass seed can be sown and flowers planted.

Supervisor Kampe said the township will aid wherever possible in this work of beautifying the last resting place of the early pioneer settlers, some of whom were buried in this cemetery over 100 years ago. Charles Denny, a Revolutionary War soldier was buried here in 1832 and two

Civil War veterans, Abraham Evans and Charles Brill were also given a last resting place in this cemetery.

The Garden club hopes to have the beautification work on this burial plot completed before Memorial Day. Mrs. William Semmler attended a luncheon at the Community Center foundation in Palos Park Tuesday noon.

The old Stellwagon buildings on Front street which have been an eye sore for years, are in a worse state than ever since unknown wreckers have started tearing down these buildings piece by piece. Windows have been smashed by stones and lumber torn from the structures is disappearing over night.

Mrs. Robert Bechstein who has been quite ill with an attack of the flu the past week, is much improved. Mr. and Mrs. William Semmler entertained guests Sunday in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harland Merrell who were married last December. Mr. Merrell is the new linotype operator and pressman at the News-Bulletin office.

William Miller, 70 years old, a former Mokena resident, died Monday morning in the St. Joseph hospital in Joliet. He had been residing at 55 West Wallace Street in Joliet.

He was born in Mokena and came to Joliet as a young man and was one of the founders of the Joliet Transfer company. He retired a few years ago.

Surviving are one son, Walter, three daughters, Elsie and Dorothy Miller, and Mrs. Peter Marietta, 11 grandchildren and one brother, Charles. Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon at the Sonntag Funeral home in Joliet.

Pure Milk Annual Meeting March 14

Easily the most important membership meeting in many years of Pure Milk Association history, is the consensus of organization officers and directors concerning PMA's annual meeting to be held Tuesday, March 14, in the auditorium theater and hotel, Chicago.

Advance reservations point to record attendance, due not only to the desire to help chart the Association's course in the coming year, but to the general interest of the all-day program which has been arranged for members and their wives.

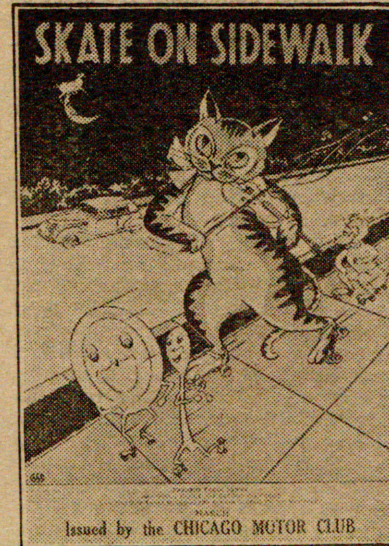

At the morning session General Manager Arthur H. Lauterbach will report on Association changes and progress since he came to Chicago from Philadelphia last September, and a special feature of this year's business session will be individual reports by central office executives summarizing the work of their departments the past year.

Local correspondents for Pure Milk, the Association's membership publication, will be honor guests at the annual Women's luncheon, to be held in the Auditorium Hotel ballroom. Among other special guests will be newspaper women and home economists from Chicago and the milk shed territory, home demonstration agents from the milk shed counties, and Ruth Humphreys, national 4-H champion and Thos. E. Wilson, scholarship winner in home economics. She is the daughter of the Ray B. Humphreys of Whitewater, Wis., and a freshman in the University of Wisconsin. "Life and Adventures in the Arctic World," by Anauta, a Baffin Bay Eskimo, wearing her native costume, will be a feature of the Woman's Luncheon program.

"Co-operation, More than Just a Way to Market Milk" will be discussed by Clifford V. Gregory, associate publisher of Wallace's Farmer and Wisconsin Agriculturist, at the afternoon session.

The Plato Center, Ill., Community Orchestra of thirty-five high school students, any of them from PMA families, directed by John Schaff, will provide musical entertainment throughout the day.

A complimentary tea for all PMA women will end the day. On the tea program Professor Franz A. Aust of the University of Wisconsin, will give an illustrated talk, "Building Beauty into Farm Home Grounds."

Hey diddle diddle—the cat can fiddle only as long as she and her friends do their skating on the sidewalks. That is the lesson illustrated by the March safety poster distributed by the Chicago Motor Club to more than 39,000 schools in Illinois and Indiana.

The vivid blue and yellow poster shows the Cat fiddling while skating on the sidewalk with her friends, the Dog, the Plate, and the Spoon. In the background the Cow jumps over the moon.

"Skate on Sidewalk" reads the legend at the top of the poster, while at the bottom of the poster children are asked, "Can You Give Three Reasons for Always Skating on the Sidewalk?"

Primary Room

The children are busy practicing for their assembly program to be given March 24. They are working very hard and they hope the program will be a success.

The border for March consists of cunning little kittens flying their kites.

Intermediate Room

The Intermediate Room is decorated attractively with a border of tulips and a border of ducks.

We are happy that the children who had the flu are able to be in school again.

Junior High Room

The Junior High room has attractive Dutch posters on display this month as a border in their room.

The room still holds the trophy for having the largest number of mothers in attendance at the last P. T. A. meeting.

A very entertaining amateur show was presented by several pupils on Tuesday during the free period.

High School

Last week was test week in the high school room. Report cards were given out Monday, and everyone resolved to study harder this six weeks. The history class has a large new world map to use in connection with studying current events. The map is mounted on beaver board to which clippings of each week's main events may be tacked.

Attendance Report

The percentages for last month are as follows: Primary Room 93.6, Intermediate room 96.25, Junior high 94.6, High School 93.0. There were 15 cases of tardiness in all the rooms combined.

No Need To Cover Them

Covering dishes of cooked or left-over foods for normal storage in the family refrigerator is a thing of the past for this attractive homemaker, who is proudly showing her guests her new "Cold Wall" type Frigidaire. This refrigerator is a new invention of General Motors in which cooling is accomplished by radiation and refrigerated walls. Using low temperatures and high atmospheric moisture, without the usual moisture-robbing air circulation, which is not necessary with this method of refrigeration, foods even in uncovered dishes are preserved fresh, full-colored and full-flavored for long periods. A special meat tender in this refrigerator provides just the right combination of cold temperature, moisture and air circulation to keep fresh meats in that condition.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

CARTER FIELD

President's appointment of Amlie to I. C. C. regarded as poorest he has ever made . . . Seems certain of defeat . . . Roosevelt long bitter against independent commissions . . . Talk of barter with Germany brings up difficulties . . . Rumor that Morgenthau will resign bobs up again.

WASHINGTON. — Harry L. Hopkins tells a story about a herring fisherman who had a great deal of trouble keeping his fish alive in his tanks, and finally hit on the device of putting a catfish in each tank. The catfish, Hopkins says, kept things so stirred up that the herring did not succumb to ennui or whatever was the trouble before.

The story is apropos now because it is being used as an explanation of why President Roosevelt appointed Thomas R. Amlie to the interstate commerce commission, an appointment generally regarded as one of the poorest, from the standpoint of practical politics, entirely aside from any merit or demerit it may have, that Mr. Roosevelt has ever made.

It is pointed out by those telling the story that the President has long been bitter about the independent commissions. He does not approve of these bodies which are not "integrated" with the administration—or, in short, those which the administration cannot control.

There is nothing new about Mr. Roosevelt's feeling in this particular. He did not like the federal trade commission, and "threw a catfish" into that body after removing—illegally, as the Supreme court later held—William E. Humphrey. The catfish thrown into the Supreme court was Justice Hugo L. Black. Frank R. McNinch has been the catfish for two bodies, the federal power commission and the communications commission.

Marriner S. Eccles has been a particularly effective catfish. He not only has kept the federal reserve board stirred up but has tangled with various other government units.

Public Defeat for the President Almost Certain

It is understood on Capitol Hill to have been Aubrey W. Williams, late lieutenant of Harry Hopkins in WPA, and now head of the youth administration, who originated the Amlie idea, which has proved as much of a catfish for the United States senate as the Supreme court enlargement proposal did, though with apparently almost as great a certainty of accomplishing a public defeat for the President.

Roosevelt began his practice of tossing a catfish in every tank he could before he began his aggressive fight to "co-ordinate" these independent agencies. In the government reorganization bill as he originally planned it, it was proposed that most of them be "co-ordinated" by the simple process of putting them under the White House.

The President made no secret of his ideas in this connection. What on Capitol Hill and in certain other quarters was regarded as a move which would so tremendously increase the powers of the Chief Executive as to be a step toward dictatorship, Roosevelt himself saw as a move toward reform and efficiency. He talked about his ideas in press conferences long before his bill was sent to the Capitol. In fact, he talked so persuasively, and so many sympathetic articles were written about the efficiency of his ideas, that later he had to begin soft peddling on this angle.

Difficulties Face Barter Agreement With Germany

Talk of barter with Germany, primarily to move such agricultural products as cotton and land into the "vacuum" which exists in Germany, brings up the essential objections that the men working under Secretary of State Cordell Hull on the reciprocal trade agreements have to face. They are the same objections which resulted in George N. Peek being thrown out of the administration in the early days of the trade agreements, though with variations.

For example, the first objection to barter with Germany is that the particular trades proposed were not barter at all. They involved payment for American raw materials in a special type of German marks, which could be spent only inside Germany. Acceptance of them of course made impossible any three-way type of trade.

The latest proposal does not contemplate the use of these special marks, but the acceptance of German products, mostly steel, wire, etc., in exchange for the cotton and land which complicate America's agricultural problem. Of course the steel and wire industry does not like this idea at all. For every pound of German steel and wire imported as a result of this proposed barter agreement, obviously, there will be just one less pound of steel or wire fabricated inside the United States.

It is the same sort of thing which makes any barter agreement so difficult, which makes any reciprocal trade agreement run into so many domestic objections, and which made the Chinese-wall type of tariff so easy in the old days.

Everybody is for exports. Nobody is for imports—that is nobody except Mr. Ultimate Consumer, who is never organized and therefore does not have much influence with congress or the government.

There Must Be Imports if There Are to Be Exports

In fact, the chief difference between the old tariff system and the new reciprocal trade policy is that, for the first time in American history, there is actually somebody directing the policy with respect to imports who realizes that there must be imports if there are also to be exports. Somebody, in brief, who is charged with the responsibility of encouraging imports in order to provide for exports, instead of merely throttling imports, as the old-time tariff bills did, with merely wishful thinking as to exports.

The chief objection to straighten out barter agreements by Hull's lieutenants is that in effect this takes international trade out of private hands and makes it a government matter. Also it takes the movement of goods out of the established channels of trade.

The government agent anxious to swap cotton for something, in order to get rid of a cotton surplus, is not going to worry too much about whether the kind of barbed wire he accepts in its place is the sort that the farmers of this country really want. If he happens to get the right kind, he not only displaces workers in American wire plants but he is compelled to get the wire to the farmers in some new way, which plays havoc with the merchants who formerly supplied the farmers.

But the chief objection the trade experts have to barter is more fundamental. Every time there is a barter agreement, anywhere in the world, it tends to restrict free trade all over the world.

Rumor Morgenthau Will Resign Bobs Up Again

The little boy who cried "Wolf, wolf," when there was no wolf has nothing on the rumor that Henry Morgenthau Jr. will resign as secretary of the treasury. The first rumor of Morgenthau's resignation came within a few months after he had succeeded William H. Woodin at the head of the treasury department. It has been bobbing up ever since, on the average of not less than once every two months.

So when the real time comes probably no one will believe the warning. But there are actual reasons this time for believing that Morgenthau is on the verge of resignation, and for two perfectly understandable reasons.

Well-informed sources say that the President and Morgenthau have finally reached just about the breaking point on the chief issue on which they have so consistently differed. It can be summed up in the words "balanced budget." But it includes much more than just spending more than the government's income year after year. It takes in also the continual movement of the President toward the left, whereas Morgenthau has clung to the original conservative views he entertained when he came to Washington.

When Morgenthau became secretary of the treasury he was perfectly willing to follow instructions because he realized that he did not know very much about Treasury problems. By dint of hard work and long hours, however, he has learned a great deal about public finances. The more he has learned the more outspoken he has become in his advocacy of his original conservative viewpoint.

This does not mean that Mr. Morgenthau has at any time been disloyal to the President. On the contrary there is scarcely a man in the administration who has been so steadfastly devoted to every whim and wish of the President.

But inside the cabinet he has fought for his own ideas, on the budget, on spending, or harassing business, etc.

Secretary Worried Over Plan for More Spending

Right now the same old battle is being waged again with the group which advocates more spending and which worries not at all about the mounting size of the federal debt, headed by Marriner S. Eccles of the federal reserve board. Morgenthau is said by friends to be more disturbed than ever before on this particular issue.

First, the secretary is much surer that he is right now than he ever was before. Second, he has always yielded before because the argument was made that the need for letting spending run above receipts was only temporary—that with the passage of time the spending could be reduced, as private employment increased, and that actually the budget could be balanced.

Now Morgenthau believes that such an objective will never be attained so long as the present advice the President is being given from the other camp is heeded—that the men who want more spending and more pump priming now will also want it next year, almost regardless of any conceivable set of events in the meantime, and that they will want it the following year, and the year after that.

Celia Seems Dumb

By GLORIA SINCLAIR
© Associated Newspapers.
WNU Service.

CELIA DRAYTON'S coming to Dashville was heralded by considerable excitement in what fondly believed itself the "younger set." Dashville was fast emerging from villagehood and was eminently city-conscious. Celia came from New York. All the girls were prepared for ultra-sophistication.

A few came over to her aunt's farm to see her the very first evening. They found a pretty, healthy girl with a markedly simple straightforward manner.

"Dumb, she seems to me," said Violet Ray, who was in normal school, was too thin and had no "steady" boy friend.

"I've come down here to play tennis, get some swimming in a really truly lake and run wild in the sunshine," laughed Celia to her aunt later. "I simply won't be inveigled into bridge parties or indoor waste of time. Yes, dearest aunt, you may give one dance for me, only I really want to live in the lake, excepting when I'm on the tennis courts."

"Evidently she can't play bridge. I guess she's not much of a dancer, either. And, gosh, that dress had no style at all. You might buy it anywhere. I thought from what Mrs. Webber said her niece was something marvelous."

"Darn good looking," said the boys, hoping their tennis would pass muster.

Mrs. Webber laughed. "Never mind, Celia," she said, "I want them to see you dance—that's why I'm giving a dance for you. They're all run silly with trying to be what they believe New York is. They are just babies with new toys. Your uncle can't stay in the room when Milly Batt tries to smoke. He says she looks just like 'Guendolyn the Tame Chimpanzee' who smoked at the last circus. I know you'll forgive them if they try to snub you. If they knew who you were they'd crawl at your feet."

"But all I want is for them to be kind and friendly," said Celia, stretching her well-molded arms. "I'm simply spoiling for a swim." "Did I tell you that Wyatt Fischer is coming tomorrow?" asked Mrs. Webber. "Well, he is. You know he is just through the Beaux Arts in Paris. He has been offered a position in his father's office in Philadelphia and we think he will go far." "I knew him—a little—in New York," and Celia blushed slightly. "Well, he won't tell these good young people a word until we say he may—about anything," she said, vaguely.

"There isn't anything to tell," said Celia, "excepting that I am on the stage."

The farmhouse made a lovely setting for Mrs. Webber's dance. It was filled with fine old furniture and boasted wide rooms which had been recently floored with polished oak. Celia looked lovely in a simple pink dress that none but her aunt knew bore a Paris label.

The rooms were filled; some good jazz musicians gave their best. And in the middle of the evening young Wyatt walked in and smiled at Celia.

"So you're really back," was all she said.

"And with a real job," he replied meaningly, as they glided out on the floor.

"Gosh, she can dance all right," said Violet, powdering her uncomely nose.

"I'll say she can. But she has no line," responded Mildred Batt, who was short-winded and clumsy.

"Line nothing! She's got 'it,'" declared Polly Dawson, a freshman at the state university, good looking and a first-class athlete.

After a delicious supper Mrs. Webber, who loved young people and knew how to make an evening happy, rose and, nodding to Celia, said:

"We have tonight been celebrating my little niece's engagement to Wyatt Fisher, whom you all know." Consternation registered on almost all the girls' faces. "You will also like to hear that dear little Celia is 'Isolde' the dancer, whose picture I know you've seen in the rotogravure sections of your Sunday papers. She will be married from my home Tuesday next. Now, Celia, have you anything to say, dear?"

"Only that I do hope you will like me, for I am going to live here in the summertime. You see, Wyatt knows you all and I don't." The sweet, gentle voice went on: "I feel rather lost among you, for I am the only stranger."

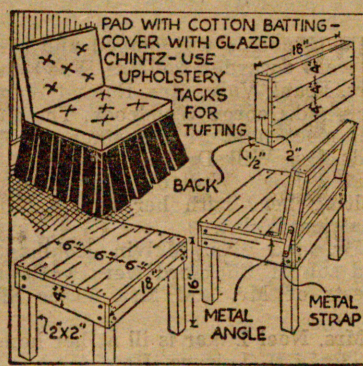

Polly Dawson jumped up and ran to Celia and hugged her. "We'll be friends, for your service is fine and you can dance and you can swim." Every one laughed, for all loved impulsive Polly. "And we won't give a darn for the eats," she whispered naughtily in Celia's ear.

A Tribute to Books

Clarence Day's tribute to books is as follows: "The world of books is the most remarkable creation of man. Nothing else that he builds ever lasts. Monuments fall, nations perish, civilizations grow old and die out, and, after an era of darkness, new races build others. But in the world of books are volumes that have seen this happen again and again and yet live on, still young, still as fresh as the day they were written, still telling men's hearts of the hearts of men centuries dead."

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I have both of your books, and have made many things from them that have surprised my family. Most women can't drive a nail straight, but I can do that better than I can sew. I have been thinking that now with slipcovers used so much, one could make a chair out of plain lumber and cover it. Perhaps you could publish something like this in the paper. D. M."

THE POLITICAL MACHINE

"If the automobile had been developed in the same way that the political machine has developed, it would now weigh ten tons and cost five thousand dollars, it would have attached to it a steamroller, a lawn mower, an egg beater, a permanent-wave machine and heaven only knows what else!"—U. S. Representative Bruce Barton.

about driving nails, may want to call on Dad or Young Son to help with making the simple chair I have sketched here. The metal angles and straps to strengthen the back may be bought at any hardware store along with the nails and screws. When the chair is covered in two tones of chintz with edges of back and seat piped in the darker color, it is really very smart. It is especially useful in a bedroom or hall. If covered in the right colors, it will also look well in the living room.

Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries, contains 48 pages of step-by-step directions which have helped thousands of women. If your home is your hobby you will also want Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Order by number, enclosing 25 cents for each book. If you order both books, copy of the new Rag Rug Leaflet will be included free. Those who have both books may secure leaflet for 6 cents in postage. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Napoleon in Exile

The world's most restless and ambitious nature, Napoleon, spent the last six years of his life in exile on the little Island of St. Helena, learning enough English words to read what was going on in the Europe he once controlled, dictating his memoirs, gossiping about his English custodians, preserving order and harmony in his little French household, the sole crumbs of existence left him to mumble.

ACTS FAST TO BRING RELIEF FROM COLDS

This Simple Way Eases Pain with Amazing Speed

1. To ease pain and reduce fever take 2 Bayer Tablets — drink a glass of water. 2. If throat is raw from cold, crush and dissolve 3 Bayer Tablets in 1/4 glass of water . . . gargle.

Use Genuine BAYER Aspirin—the Moment Your Cold Starts

The simple way pictured above often brings amazingly fast relief from discomfort and sore throat accompanying colds.

Try it. Then—see your doctor. He probably will tell you to continue with Bayer Aspirin because it acts so fast to relieve discomforts of a cold. And to reduce fever.

This simple way, backed by scientific authority, has largely supplanted the use of strong medicines in easing cold symptoms. Perhaps the easiest, most effective way yet discovered. But make sure you get genuine BAYER Aspirin.

The Safety Sensation of 1939!

THE NEW Firestone CHAMPION

The Only Tire Made with the NEW SAFETY-LOCK CORD BODY and NEW GEAR-GRIP TREAD...

NEVER before in our experience has a tire met with such instant and unanimous approval as the new Firestone Champion Tire. It's the Safety Sensation of 1939! Our customers have started a word-of-mouth campaign that is making this the biggest selling tire we've ever had. Motor car manufacturers have been so impressed by its superior performance that they have adopted it for their 1939 models.

Why? Because the Firestone Champion Tire is an entirely new achievement in safety engineering.

Stronger Cord Body. This is accomplished first, by the use of a completely new type of tire cord called "Safety-Lock," in which the cotton fibers are more compactly interwoven to assure cooler running and provide greater strength. Then, the fibers in each individual cord, the cords in each ply and the plies themselves, are all securely locked together by a new and advanced Firestone process of Gum-Dipping which provides amazingly greater strength. And greater strength means greater safety.

More Non-Skid Mileage. The new Safety-Lock cord construction provides the extra strength needed for the use of the new, thicker, tougher, deeper Firestone Gear-Grip tread which delivers remarkably longer non-skid mileage. This sensational new tread is called "Gear-Grip" because of its unique design — it has more than 3,000 sharp-edged angles which grip the road with a sure-footed hold to protect against skidding and assure a safe stop.

Let your nearby Firestone Dealer or Firestone Auto Supply and Service Store equip your car with a new set of Firestone Champion Tires — the only tires made that are safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

After the War, Whither Spain? General Franco Won't Answer

Continued Fascist Rule,
Probably with King
Seen Likely

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

The scene: Spain. A final bullet ricochets from the sun-baked, blood-drenched wall. Peace returns to a land which has lost more than 1,000,000 of its best men since July 18, 1936. The civil war becomes ugly history—and then what?

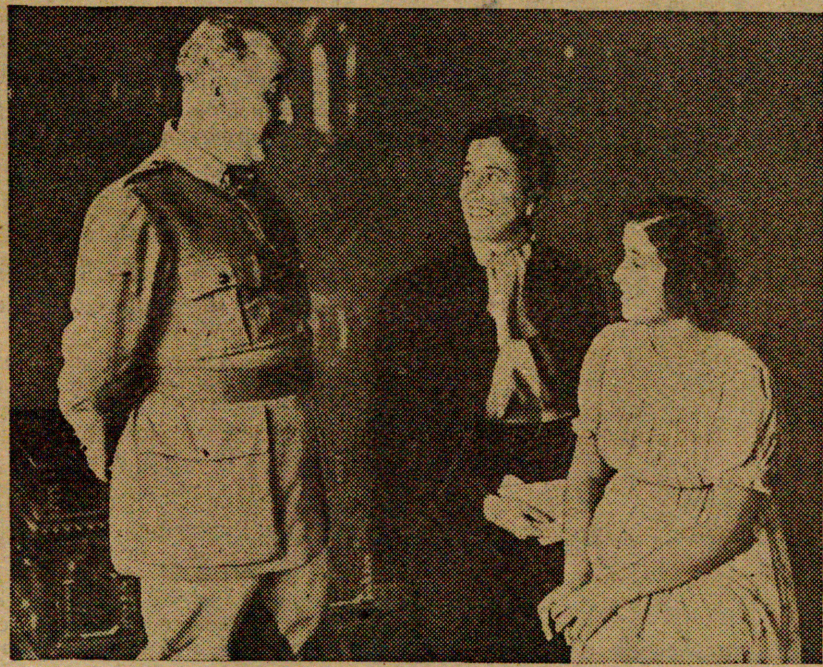

The man who can answer is Francisco Franco, a business-like generalissimo known to his Loyalist enemies as "El Carnicero," the butcher, and to his insurgent followers as "El Caudillo," the chief. General Franco is victor, thanks to superior military strategy, plus a whip hand over Spain's natural resources, plus help from Berlin and Rome.

Spain's war needs repetition here only because things said and done since 1930 must be answered for today. Will General Franco pour awful vengeance on the Loyalist enemies who banished him to a Canary islands outpost in 1936? Will France and England pay the price of their indecision these past two years by losing all prestige in Spain? Will dictatorships rise, or fall, when Spain's final die is cast?

Man of the Hour.

Too many answers rest with Franco, a shrewd military-political genius who became a cadet in Alcazar's "West Point" at 14, won mild fame fighting the Moroccan Riffs at 23, and became the army's youngest brigadier general at 34. Since April, 1931, when King Alfonso fled the country after republican election victories, Franco has been closely enmeshed in Spain's officialdom as a man to be reckoned with.

Once chief of the foreign legion and head of the war college, his allegiance to the deposed Alfonso was so renowned that the jittery young republic quickly made him military governor of the Balearic islands—his first "banishment." In 1934 Franco was rushed back to the mainland to crush leftist revolts against the newly established rightist regime. It was then that Asturias and Catalonia dubbed him "the butcher," a resentment which probably accounts for the stubborn resistance those provinces offered in the civil war. But to rightist Spain Franco became "the man of the hour," certainly the strongest single figure in the fight Catholics, capitalists, monarchists and phalanxists (fascists) were waging against a growing Communist element.

The second banishment, to a dreary Canary islands outpost, came immediately after a leftist victory in the January, 1936, election. But six months later a mysterious civilian-garbed figure climbed into a British plane at Las Palmas, capital of the Canaries. Next day, July 18, Moroccans remembered the 23-year-old youth who had suppressed the Riffs. Within a few hours Moors were rallied under the insurgent flag and the war was on.

Franco's Course Steady.

The next two and one-half years made Spain a common battleground on which all Europe's grudges were paraded. Communist fought Fascist, while democracies stood on the sidelines hoping vainly that each would slaughter the other. In far away lands the issue of Christianity versus paganism was held a vital issue in the war. The world's eyes were focused on a conflict where American fought Italian and German fought Russian, where religious, political and economic issues seemed at times to far outshadow the mere fact of civil war in Spain.

Through all this General Franco has pursued a steady course, aided by Fascists, ignored by democracies for obvious reasons of political expediency. But when Barcelona fell in late January and the war seemed headed for an ultimate insurgent victory, Franco began emerging in his true proportions—the man of the hour. His will shall probably be done in Spain.

He is obviously indebted to Italy and Germany. Rome admits 3,000 Fascist troops have been killed in Spain, and from Balearic island bases a giant Italian air armada has operated against the Loyalists. Germany has been equally helpful but neither nation has acted from goodness of heart.

Iberian Peninsula Important.

First, the Franco campaign has offered a chance to fight Communism, but this has been more an excuse than an end in itself. More significant are huge imports of Spanish iron by Italy and Germany, both suffering acutely from lack of metal resources. Still greater is the Iberian peninsula's importance in Italy's campaign to control the Mediterranean and force territorial concessions from France.

Italy-German services have been outright gifts to General Franco, therefore he can honestly claim to owe them no monetary debt. But how about the moral debt? Can he turn on Fascism now that the war is won?

He barely might, for one good reason. More than anything else Spain now needs money for reconstruction, obtainable only from Great Britain, the United States and, to a lesser degree, France. Great Britain is especially anxious to make these loans because Spain was once an excellent customer. Now British coal exports to Spain have dropped 37 per cent; motor cars, 95 per cent, and machinery, 90 per cent.

Greater Spain Predicted.

This is the very logical reasoning behind current British-French overtures to lure Franco from the dictators. It is emphasized still more by the growing belief that Spain will some day assume new importance among European nations, holding a whip hand over any potential Mediterranean conflict.

But just as France and Britain look rather foolish in recognizing Franco after he has won his battle, so would Franco look foolish if he tossed his Fascist friends into the ashcan. For every nation concerned it would be an unnatural alliance based on immediate expediency, and would merely delay the eventual showdown.

Hints have already been dropped concerning Franco's governmental plans. Last year an order was issued restoring citizenship and properties to King Alfonso, the alleged inside story of that restoration being this: A monarchist delegation met Alfonso in Switzerland last summer, suggesting that his privileges and possessions might be restored if Alfonso would abdicate in favor of his third son, Prince Juan. Alfonso reportedly replied he might.

Healthiest Bourbon.

Don Juan, not a great lover like the cabellero of ancient Seville, is a healthy young man of 25 who was brought up under English influence. He even served as a lieutenant in the British navy. Unlike his two elder brothers, the count of Covadonga (who died in Florida last year) and Prince Jaime, he shows no trace of the tragic maladies which have afflicted the rest of the family. He was married in 1935 to Marie, Princess of Bourbon-Siciles. They have one daughter.

Don Juan's appointment would be an important pacifier, since he would return to Spain as an outsider capable of arbitrating the differences between Insurgents and Loyalists.

The selection might meet with Roman disfavor because of the strong influence England has played on the youth during his formative years. But Il Duce rules "under" a king in Italy and seems to get along nicely. Certainly there is no reason to think Franco would retire without tasting the fruits of his dearly gained victory. He would probably become premier under such an arrangement.

Anyway Prince Juan, who has spent the past few years under close surveillance of Rome, probably bears stronger Fascist leanings than most people imagine.

Russia Discards 'Biggest' Complex In Newest Plan

Russia's "big" complex is disappearing.

The ambitious Soviet, which once decided to house its massive new industries in such centers as Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev and Gorky, has now decided to build a lot of little industries which in the aggregate will be even bigger than the original "big" idea.

This is the essence of the third five-year plan, being changed in mid-stream by Dictator Joseph Stalin and Premier Vyacheslav M. Molotov. Complete details are being announced at the Communist party congress opening in Moscow March 18.

"Gigantism" will soon give way to erection of manufacturing plants closer to sources of raw materials—and the Soviet evidently has plenty of such resources still untapped. By costly experience Russia has found her big industries to be unwieldy, attracting more population than was healthy to a few centralized points while the rest of the country went unaided.

One of the most important coming developments is creation of a "second Baku" oil base in middle Asia, where American machinery will be used to open untouched petroleum reserves. Since Baku is located at a strategic point where an invader could easily nip off the Soviet's important petroleum supply, the new development has important military significance. The "second Baku" is far removed from enemy planes.

Other small industrial developments are planned in the Ural mountains, while a large metallurgical base is being built in central Asia where the Soviet claims it has all facilities for building machinery. Most such plants are being built near coal deposits or potential power sites.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Recommends Generous Use of Eggs; Shows How This Protective Food Helps to Balance the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ANY experienced homemaker knows the many cookery uses of eggs. Indeed, she is likely to feel that she could not keep house without this indispensable ingredient, which a French chef once described as "the cement that holds the castles of cookery together." It is true that we should have to do without some of our most delectable dishes if eggs were not available to use as thickening, leavening, coating, binder, clarifier, stabilizer or garnish. But even more significant than their contribution to good cooking are their splendid nutritional values.

A Notable Protective Food

Eggs rank next to milk in that group of mineral—and vitamin-rich foods that we call "protective."

They contain substances that are very efficient for growth and development. And in the opinion of nutritionists, they are more nearly interchangeable with milk than any other food.

Eggs are among the first foods to be added to the milk diet of infants. And homemakers who desire to give their families well-balanced meals should provide an egg daily for every individual.

This requirement can be reduced, if necessary, to four eggs weekly. But luckily, as we head toward spring, eggs become more plentiful, and lower in price. And it is usually possible for every family to obtain a full quota of this splendid food . . . so rich in the elements that help to build muscle, bone and blood.

A Fine Body Builder

Eggs contain proteins of high quality, and their proteins seem to be particularly well adapted to building body tissue. That is one reason why this food is so desirable in the child's diet . . . so useful in constructing the diet for adults who need "building up." It also makes eggs a logical choice as a main dish for Lenten meals.

It's interesting to note that the proteins of the white and yolk of an egg are quite different in their properties. Egg white is almost pure protein and water, while the protein of the yolk is composed of a different assortment of amino acids, or building stones.

The yolk also contains fat . . . in a finely emulsified form, so that like milk fat, it is comparatively easy to digest. And it is the yolk which is highly prized for its rich store of minerals and vitamins. It is therefore considered the most important part of the egg for young children, and the white is often withheld and only the grated yolk given.

Rich in Iron and Phosphorus
Eggs are notable as a source of iron and phosphorus. Iron is necessary for the formation of the hemoglobin or red pigment of the blood, and the iron in eggs is valuable for this purpose. Phosphorus is the mineral that pairs with calcium in building teeth and bones. It also plays an important part in regulating the neutrality of the blood. The phosphorus in eggs occurs in a form that is particularly well adapted to the needs of the growing body.

Four Important Vitamins

As our knowledge of vitamins has increased, nutritionists have urged that eggs be accorded a wider place in the diet, for they supply four of these vital factors—vitamins A, B, D and G. They are an important source of vitamin A, which promotes growth and helps build resistance to disease. The appetite-promoting vitamin B occurs in lesser amounts than A, but its presence helps to increase the quantity of this essential substance included in the daily diet.

Eggs are one of the few foods naturally containing vitamin D, sometimes called the sunshine vitamin. And it has been determined that they are rich in vitamin G, which is required for health and vitality at all ages.

Raw Eggs vs. Cooked

Eggs are one of the foods that digest most satisfactorily, about 97 to 98 per cent of their protein being digested and absorbed. Moreover, the thoroughness of digestion does not seem to be affected by the method of cooking, and a hard-cooked egg, when well masticated, is as completely digested as one that is soft-cooked. Raw egg white on the other hand is not as completely utilized as when slightly cooked. This shows the fallacy of the old-fashioned idea that raw eggs were more desirable for invalids than cooked eggs.

Brown Eggs vs. White

Some people have an idea that the color of the shell has a bearing upon the nutritive value of an dishes, their identity can be entirely concealed.

"Sunny side up" may be the most popular method of preparing eggs. But don't get into a menu rut, whether you are serving them for breakfast, dinner, lunch or supper. Cook them soft. Cook them hard. Transform them into omelets and souffles. Scramble them, plain, or dressed up with cheese, diced bacon, frizzled dried beef or sausages.

Eggs for Lenten Meal

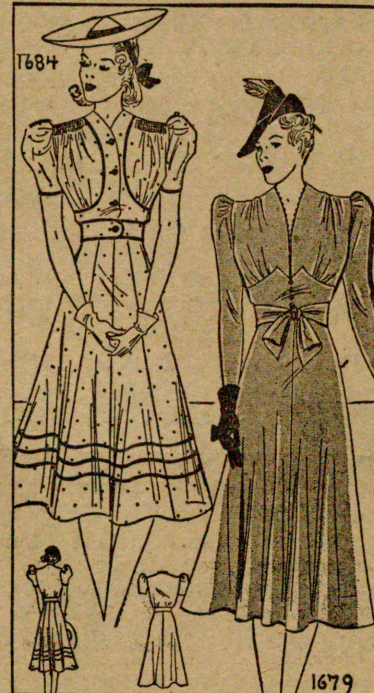

As a main dish for a Lenten meal, hard-cooked eggs may be creamed and served alone, or combined with cooked vegetables or fresh or canned fish. Use them as a binder in croquettes and loaf mixtures, as a coating for deep-fried foods.

French toast is a simple luncheon dish, combining the energy values of bread with the fine nutritive values of eggs. Hearty luncheon salads or sandwiches can be made by combining chopped or sliced hard-cooked eggs with fresh or cooked vegetables.

Since eggs admirably supplement the food values of milk, puddings made from milk and eggs are an ideal dessert for children, and help to balance the diet of adults. Custard pies, fruit whips and cakes are also delightful dishes that bring to the diet the protective values of eggs.
